Patron Ian Jordan (Chiefy) has been made a member of the New Zealand Order of Merit for services to the livestock industry

Ian Jordan has come a long way since paying 30 guineas for a stud ewe, and he's hoping his legs can carry him a little further to enable him to collect his New Year Honours medal. Blenheim-based Jordan is being made a Member of the New Zealand Order of Merit for services to the livestock industry. Jordan, 94, is retired from farming duties, but he said he still liked to get involved.

He is receiving the honour for contributing to sheep and cattle breeding in Marlborough, nationally and internationally. His first and greatest passion in farming has been breeding Southdown sheep, he said, but his list of roles and achievement stretches far and wide. Jordan is currently Honorary Judge for the Southdown breed, and his Jersey cattle and Southdown sheep are regular exhibitors at Agricultural and Pastoral Shows – numerous trophies for his prize animals decorate his home.

But amongst all his achievements, he said one of the greatest memories of his career was seeing his son, Roger Jordan, place runner-up in a world ploughing contest. "That was one of my highlights."
